

SOS Marine Showcase its Dan Buoy a MOB Solution at METS

SOS Marine will be showcasing their new product the SOS Dan Buoy. This is a compact, inflatable marker to be used to indicate where a person has gone overboard. Designed to be thrown overboard without need to set or activate and stands 2 metres above water level within seconds of immersion in water.

“The SOS Dan Buoy is compact and addresses the MOB problem, with its enhanced visibility it is being used in Air Sea rescues where it’s being dropped from a helicopter to mark a location” said Ross Spencer, SOS Marine Managing Director.

After removing the drogue and attaching an anchor it can also be used as temporary marker for wrecks, channels or similar.

The SOS Dan Buoy can be used in salt and fresh water; it is not restricted by the size of boat, nor by language, age or sex of the user. It can be used on ships, yachts or small craft.

SOS Marine designs and manufactures specialised lifejackets, safety equipment, combat and security equipment.

They have established a 30 year reputation for designing innovative products, many with world-wide patents to meet maritime safety solutions. They operate in accordance with the ISO 9001 quality system and are an Australian-owned company based in Sydney.
